In Our Own Voice: Living With and Overcoming the Challenges Posed by Mental Illness

Presented by
Certified NAMI IOOV presenters

Learn about mental illness from people who have been there. This is a recovery education presentation given by trained consumer presenters for other consumers, family members, friends, health providers, law enforcement, faith communities and interested members of the community. It is interactive, comprehensive and enriches the audience's understanding of how people living with mental illness cope with the reality of these illnesses while recovering and reclaiming productive lives.

Mark your calendars for September 25th...
Plan to attend, bring a friend, and pass the word on to others!

NAMI San Mateo County General Meetings are free and open to the public. We welcome all who support our mission to improve the quality of life for people with mental illnesses and their families.

NAMI Walks

Lindley Meadow, Golden Gate Park
www.namiwalkSFbay.org

NAMIWalk 2013 on June 1st was an amazing success! Over 2,500 people gathered in Lindley Meadow on a beautiful sunny day. Almost 100 volunteers in bright yellow shirts handed out water, checked in walkers and kept us safe on the route.

People carried signs, pom-poms, backpacks, new NAMIWalk t-shirts and little kids on their shoulders. And our featured speaker, author and mental health advocate, Kevin Hines, inspired the crowd and reminded all gathered that there is a way through our darkest moments and that we are there to support each other.

We have reached our goal of raising $450,000 with proceeds going to work throughout Alameda, Alameda County South, Contra Costa, Marin, San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties.

Thanks to all who joined us at the Walk and those who participated otherwise!

Important Local Opportunity to be Heard - MHSOAC Forum

Thursday, August 8 • 3:00 to 6:30pm
Embassy Suites Monterey Bay Hotel--Seaside
1441 Canyon Del Rey, Seaside, CA 93955

The purpose of the MHSOAC Forums is to get feedback on mental health services in your area. If you are a consumer or a family member, these meetings are an important opportunity to share your concerns with the people who set the agenda for mental health services across the state. Please make an effort to advocate for local services at the Forum. Your insight could help change mental health services for all of us!

For more information contact David Czarnecki, Advocacy Coordinator at NAMI CA at (916) 567-0163 or david.czarnecki@namicalifornia.org. Space is limited, please RSVP if you plan to attend individually or with a group at (916) 445-8696 or mhsoac@mhsoac.ca.gov.

A message from the MHSOAC:

"The MHSOAC is interested in hearing from stakeholders about how MHSA services and supports that were funded as a result of Proposition 63 have made a difference for them, their families and/or their community. MHSOAC Committee members and staff will facilitate a semi-structured discussion with attending stakeholders designed to elicit feedback and diverse views. Information and stories gleaned through this discussion will be summarized annually and used to provide feedback to the MHSOAC about how persons have experienced the MHSA in local communities throughout California. This information will be considered by the MHSOAC in shaping future policy direction."

Volunteer at the NAMI CA Conf!

Get in 1/2 day for free...

Anyone attending the NAMI California Convention... read on! The conference is being held in Burlingame again this year, at the SF Airport Marriott, Aug 15-17. <http://namicalifornia.org/>. It's an inspiring experience of information and networking. We're fortunate it's so close.

If you can volunteer 1/2 day, either 8/16 or 8/17, you can attend the second half for free. There are still a few slots open. So, if you are interested, contact Ron Shaw at ron.shaw@namicalifornia.org or 916.288.5498. Or locally contact Juliana at julianafuer@gmail.com.

Full Care in Primary Care—Not PSAs

There are two main reasons why the U.S. public remains very much in the dark about mental illness:

- 1) Most of us will agree that what happens in behavioral health care service delivery is largely an inside baseball conversation among those in the field: e.g. service providers (doctors), insurance companies, government officials, employers, benefit managers, BH advocacy groups, consumer activists. Jane and John Q Citizen are not in this loop. Rampant BH jargon acts to exclude the general public from understanding or following what is going on. Just ask your neighbors and friends what/who are: mental health carve outs; capitation; bundled or global payments; full integration versus reverse integration; parity; ACOs; PCMHs; CINs; HHS; SAMHSA; NIMH; AHRQ, PCORI to name but a few of current lingo.
- 2) Studies conducted over past 30 years consistently show the wider population has no interest in being talked to about "mental illness," "mental health," or "stigma." Those topics are fearful and negative, best ignored or avoided. Nonetheless, when mental health/substance use problems arise in our families, we want private, confidential, professional, effective help. Hopefully covered under our insurance plans.

In the light of these realities, what will work to ensure improved mental health access and care? Back to the public: they have indicated over and over they prefer to have both their mental health/substance use issues and their medical conditions treated together, in a coordinated fashion, in primary care. Data bears this out: 80% of behavioral health patients now present themselves for care in the general medical setting. Not in the mental health setting.

The rub is that our behavioral health community, as dedicated and professional (and under-funded and under-resourced) as they are, are focused on the 20% who do go to, or end up in, the mental health sector. Moreover, the majority 80% of behavioral health patients going to primary care cannot access mental health care there because behavioral health practitioners cannot practice in primary care and get paid, under our mental health carve out situation.

Is there an answer? Yes: changing the doctor reimbursement system so that we no longer have two independent health care systems, medical and behavioral health; ensuring that behavioral health providers can become part of medical provider networks, and behavioral health services can be paid as part of "medical" insurance benefits. In other words, having a healthcare system that supports having both our medical and behavioral health problems addressed together in a coordinated fashion.

The trick is to get there we have to overcome our inertia and upset the status quo. We have to end the managed behavioral health situation. But, as in so many things, business may perhaps lead the way: as more and more hospital groups consolidate into larger care organizations, owned or backed by hedge funds and private equity, with more doctors joining as employees, the owner/investors of those all-inclusive (primary care, specialty care, hospital care) mega groups will be looking for efficiencies and value, which leads to profits. And at the top of the high-value, improved outcomes, and lower cost, list is.....integrated med-psych care.

Please let us know what you think and if you have any feedback or comments. And thank you for your ongoing support and interest in our mission.

July General Meeting Notes

By Jerry Thompson, board member

Our July 24th General Meeting started at 6:00 with refreshments & social time, we had over 60 people in attendance! At 7:00 Juliana Fuerbringer called the meeting to order. She presented Steve Kaplan, the head of BHRS. He shared that the County Board of Supervisors approved increased funding for pre-crisis and crisis treatment. He went on to explain in detail all of the increased services that will be available in San Mateo County.

Juliana then introduced the speakers that came from Putnam House in Walnut Creek <http://putnamclubhouse.org>. Putnam House is a "Club House" for adults recovering from a mental disorder. It is part of Clubhouse International <http://www.iccd.org>, "a membership-based social/vocational community where people living with persistent mental illness come to rebuild their lives." There are over 300 clubhouses around the world and they have proven to reduce hospitalizations and increase employment and self-esteem for their members.

Juliana Fuerbringer is working towards starting a clubhouse in San Mateo. For more information on what is happening with that project, go to www.californiaclubhouse.org.

Be sure to be at the next general meeting. When you are not here, you miss a lot!

Education Update - IOOV

Please contact the NAMI SMC office if you'd like to arrange for the free 60-90 minute presentation by In Our Own Voice speakers who share compelling and personal testimonies of living with and overcoming the challenges posed by mental illness.

Tom and Christopher have also recently trained as teacher mentors for the NAMI Peer to Peer Education course. We welcome them!

Recent graduates of the IOOV training course: Lisa Hoff, Tom Curran (blue shirt) and Christopher Jump (black shirt).

FareWELL Greg Wild

The NAMI SMC board of directors is grateful to Greg Wild for his years of service on our board. His involvement with the NAMIWALK and his collaboration with our education and support programs has been invaluable. Greg will continue to be involved with education. We'll especially miss his fine wit that enlivened our board meetings! Thank you Greg for everything you brought to our board.

CDs of NAMI Nat'l Conf Programs

This year's National Conference in San Antonio in July was packed full of interesting and informative presentations. NAMI SMC has ordered a full set of CDs covering the conference's sessions. The CDs will be available for members to listen to - contact our office at 650-638-0800 for information and a list of the sessions.

Medicate Me, Even When I Refuse

By Erin Hawkes, <http://www.huffingtonpost.ca>, June 3, 2013

Suppose your toddler wanted to play with your kitchen knives. They are bright and shiny, and she sees you use them everyday, so she asks for them. "No," you kindly but firmly say. "They are very sharp and would hurt you." Your toddler begins to whine, then yell, then tantrum when you refuse to let her play with those knives. Do you give in, when you see how much it means to her, how upset she is that you authoritatively refuse to grant her permission? No, you are a good parent, and because you are responsible for her safety, you calm her down and redirect her to things with which she is allowed to play. The tears dry, and her smile returns -- and she is safe.

Had she been permitted to have her way and play with the sharp knives, she would have badly cut herself. She didn't understand this; she was unaware of the danger she would have been to herself. She needed someone outside herself to keep her safe, until she was older and could understand the damage a knife can cause.

Such a scenario is reminiscent of anosognosia: the inability to recognize one's own illness, often while persisting in behaviours that are harmful to oneself. While it can also occur to due neurological disorder, it is very prevalent in psychiatric illnesses such as schizophrenia. Many people experiencing psychosis do not believe they are at all ill. They refuse help, and, unless treated against their (psychotic) will, they may harm themselves or others.

But we must have the right to harm ourselves, have we not? Such reasoning parades as a constitutional right, the right to chose what happens to our bodies and brains. Move beyond that and find that the right to refuse psychiatric treatment is a growing movement. This group insists that any treatment for a mental illness is exceedingly harmful to the person -- if indeed there is such a thing as mental illness. "Mental illness," they say, is a "personal journey," something special that must not be crushed by involuntary medication or hospitalization.

Perhaps this laissez-faire is akin to letting the child play with the knives. Yes, they might get hurt, but, as they "journey" with these knives, they would discover that to hold the hilt means no pain. Some children would learn this quickly, others more slowly and with far more cuts. In other words, if someone knew that some would come out of the play wiser, and maybe even with hardly a scrape, to play with knives is indeed a learning experience. Thus, the one that is "in control" (parent) ought not disallow the play lest they dampen the curiosity, problem-solving skills, and bravery of the child, who has their own fledgling right to harm him or herself. Perhaps. But those "learning" cuts could easily kill.

Is this then a real right? In my case, is repeatedly bashing my head against a concrete wall till both my head and the wall are bloody a right? Or cuts to my arms, slit with a razor blade -- a right? It is what I do without medication; it happens when I am ill with schizophrenia in order to release the millions of microscopic rats that I delusionally believe are eating my brain. When taking antipsychotics, the rats leave, the need to self-harm fades, and I am in my right mind.

Besides the rats and bloodletting, I fall into the realm of anosognosia when I am ill. I do not know that the rats are not real, and vehemently argue with frustrated health care professionals. I do not belong, certified, on the psych ward! The rats really are eating my brain! No, I don't want your PRNs of rat-infested Ativan!

Then come the restraints and injections.

Involuntary treatment. Anosognosia: no insight, no right?

The Mental Health Act hangs on the ward wall. Our rights. I am too drugged to read it.

I attempt to hang myself in the bathroom. Again.

The "psychiatric survivors" will love this. See the results of "treatment"? I have rights: the right to life, that right to the pursuit of happiness. Surely this cannot happen amid needles and isolation rooms and medication -- oh, how much medication.

But though some psychiatrists rely overly on their psychopharmaceutical powers, my brain is in fact too sick to heal on its own. It needs something outside itself to be healthy enough to fulfil my rights. I have seen drugs fail, but I know now that some actually clear my life of psychosis. Could I have gotten there alone? No. The hangings would have continued, eventually successful. Unmedicated "journeys" for me are a hell of hallucinations, paranoia, and delusion. Please, I do want the drugs, even though I tantrum against the injections. Please, someone, make choices for me when I cannot: choose to give me the treatment that, for me, has worked in the past. Medicate me. Don't leave me to myself; I will play with those knives, and may not learn until I bleed to death what harm I have the "right" to do.

Obamacare: Love It, Hate It or Just Plain Confused?

Starting January 1, 2014, most Americans will be required to have health insurance as part of President Obama's Affordable Care Act.

Already have insurance or looking to get it? Whether you are a senior, have a big family or own a small business, KQED's simple guide makes the bill easy for anyone to navigate. Obamacare Explained outlines the new health insurance options offered to you and shows you how to access them. If you're concerned about the cost, we also show you what help is available.

The guide is printable, embeddable, shareable and available on all portable devices. kqed.org/obamacare

The thousand-page bill covers a lot of ground and figuring out what it means for you can be a challenge. But don't panic! Help is at hand with KQED's new guide.
