Clubhouse - Source of Hope Can we bring one to San Mateo?

Clubhouse is a membership-based social/vocational community where people living with persistent mental illness come to rebuild their lives. The Clubhouse model complements and strengthens existing treatment options and programs in our county. Participation is free.

The Clubhouse is a workplace from 9-5 weekdays and a social place evenings and weekends. It provides a safe and accepting place, valuable work to perform within the organization, opportunities to socialize with friends and coworkers and access to employment and education within the wider community. Member talents are recognized and abilities utilized. There are 341 Clubhouses worldwide. Putnam House in Walnut Creek is a thriving example of Clubhouse in action. Come hear how Putnam got started and continues to be successful.

A small group is working to bring Clubhouse to San Mateo. We need feedback from consumers and their families to better understand and address the needs of our community. We appreciate hearing from you.

May General Meeting Notes

By Jerry Thompson and Maureen Sinnott, NAMI SMC board members

Our May 22 General Meeting started at 6:00 with refreshments & social time. Steve Kaplan, director of SMC BHRS, attended early for informal conversation and discussion about what is happening with behavioral health in San Mateo County. Steve Robison, NAMI SMC co-president, reminded us to join the Walk at Golden Gate Park on Saturday June 1, and team leaders shouted out the benefits of joining their team!

Maureen Sinnott, NAMI board member and a Franciscan nun, introduced the speakers panel. A brief meditation accompanied by beautiful music played by Clifton Greenwood started the presentation. Bill Kruse and Jairo Wilches, co-directors of the Spirituality Initiative, and Melinda Parker, Community Mental Health Nurse with BHRS, shared that at the request of clients, spirituality has begun to be integrated into the over-all care plan for persons using BHRS services. Three articulate consumers, Michael, Alan and Chase then inspired us by their passionate witness to how spirituality has enhanced their mental health - they were excellent speakers. These three and Clifton were the stars of the night and were awarded the "NEVER, NEVER, NEVER GIVE UP" NAMI plaque for sharing their spiritual journey with us through music and word. Truly this was a night to remember for all of us, a heartwarming meeting that helped all to see how spirituality genuinely enhances mental health! Visit the Spirituality Initiative website at www.smchealth.org/spirituality.

Don't miss the next general meeting! When you are not here, you are missing a lot!

New Website Research and Writing Join the team creating a new website for NAMI SMC. We need people who can work on developing content. 1-2 people to research and update our community resources lists; 1-2 people to write and edit content describing our services and information. This is a project you can put on your resume.

General Meetings We need people to take care of small duties at our Wednesday night general meetings - a popular community builder and great way to connect with others struggling with mental health issues. Help with contacting speakers, meeting registration, food set up...all needed to create engaging, meaningful meetings, which are held every other month.

Fundraising We will be starting a committee to work on ideas for revenue generation and community building. Are you good at fundraising? Want to give it a try? Come brainstorm with us with a willingness to roll up your sleeves.

Questions? Interested? Get on the mailing list!
Call Juliana at 650-342-5849 / julianafuer@gmail.com, or the NAMI office at 650-638-0800/namismc@sbcglobal.net.

Show up and be a part of it all.
No one need do any of this work alone!

NAMI Program Trainings

If you've attended one of our programs, please consider training to present it yourself! Training costs you nothing and requires you present at least twice...and is a highly rewarding experience (and the weekend of training is a productive retreat!). Medi-Cal Can Limit MH Visits

By Bob Egelko, San Francisco Chronicle, May 5, 2013

California can limit Medi-Cal patients to two visits per month to clinics providing psychological services, a state appeals court has ruled, rejecting a judge's decision that the restrictions violated federal law.

The federal government, which helps fund the health care program for low-income people, requires states to cover all additional costs of outpatient treatment at government-certified psychology clinics. A Sacramento County judge ruled in January 2011 that the state's two-visit-per-month rule conflicted with that federal mandate.

On Thursday, however, the Third District Court of Appeal said a state can still decide how many treatments it will cover under the program. "Full reimbursement ... does not preclude utilization controls," said Justice George Nicholson in the 3-0 ruling, which quoted a federal law requiring states to impose "reasonable standards" for government-funded medical assistance. Requiring a state to pay all costs of each visit to a clinic "does not prevent the states from limiting those visits," Nicholson said.

The ruling came in a lawsuit by the Mendocino Community Health Clinic, which provides medical care including psychological services, in Ukiah and Willits (Mendocino County) and Lakeport (Lake County). The clinic says it serves patients with little or no private insurance.

State restrictions on Medi-Cal patients' access to care are a hotly contested issue, said Anthony Wright, executive director of the consumer advocacy group Health Access.

He said California legislation to limit Medi-Cal patients to seven visits to any type of doctor in a year has been under review by the Obama administration for more than a year. In those restrictions, he said, the state accepted the federal government's insistence on allowing more frequent visits in emergencies, so that patients needing - for instance - kidney dialysis or chemotherapy were not denied life-saving care.

Treatment at a psychology clinic may not always carry the same level of urgency, but "if somebody is in the middle of a depressive bout or suicidal, it would be very detrimental to have a cap" on visits, said Wright, who is not involved in the Mendocino case.

Another unintended consequence of limiting access to ordinary medical care is that "it just drives people to the emergency room, because that has to be covered," Wright said. And emergency rooms are more expensive than typical doctor visits, he said.

Putting People in the Bipolar Driver's Seat

By Bob Carolla, NAMI Director of Media Relations, nami.org

Bipolar disorder affects more than 10 million Americans. More than one-half of all cases begin between the ages 15 to 25. The condition includes high and low mood swings between mania and depression. Energy levels and the ability to think clearly become unstable. Symptoms can lead to high-risk behavior or damage personal, school, work or financial relationships.

Bipolar disorder can be successfully treated, but because there is no cure, treatment must be continuous. People living with the illness are responsible for management of their condition, but success depends on a partnership with a psychiatrist or other providers.

Charles Bowden, M.D., clinical professor of psychiatry and pharmacology at the University of Texas (UT) Health Science Center at San Antonio, is one of the nation's leading medical experts on bipolar. In 2006, he received NAMI's prestigious Scientific Research Award. Bowden will present a session on bipolar disorder at the upcoming NAMI National Convention in San Antonio this June with other UT participants, including professors Jodi Gonzalez Arnold, Ph.D. and Vivek Singh, M.D.

Bowden's research has helped define the symptoms and biology of bipolar disorder, and he has contributed major new understandings about the effectiveness of mood-stabilizing drugs.

The understanding and science of bipolar disorder continues to evolve and understanding the latest treatments, from a research perspective and a practical intervention perspective, is important. "If we remain limited to the knowledge we had 20 years ago, or even 10 years ago, we will be simply inadequately addressing the needs of [individuals] with this common, severe disease," said Bowden in an interview with the American Psychiatric Association at a recent APA Conference.

The results of Bowden's research has helped inform the current understanding of combining treatments as potentially preferable to "monotherapy" medication treatments in the treatment plans of some with bipolar disorder. For example, there is renewed insight into understanding the significant role of depression, not just mania, in both bipolar I and II disorders. A renewed understanding that bipolar disorder can be stabilized from either the manic symptom side or the depressive symptom side has been an additional revelation from Bowden's work.

Bowden's research has long sought to put people living with bipolar disorder in the driver's seat, along with family members, in managing the condition. His approach emphasizes living well and anticipating both positive and negative developments that affect mood stability. Besides medication, self-awareness and educational counseling is part of the treatment strategy—involving a focus on lifestyle factors such as sleep time, exercise, keeping stress manageable, and avoiding or coping with major destabilizing life experiences.

At the NAMI National Convention, June 27 to 30, partnership will be the focus of Bowden's session, "Co-Managing Recovery and Bipolar: Establishing Solid Relationships with Your Provider." The session will be held Sat., June 29 at 9:15 a.m.

The night before, a special session, "I'm Not Sick; I Don't Need Help: Understanding Anagnosia," led by Dr. Xavier Amador, will be held about how a mental illness such as bipolar disorder can lead to lack of insight—such that a person to fail to recognize that they are sick. The topic has implications for Bowden's partnership approach, which depends on self-awareness for either self- or co-management. Together, the two sessions raise important perspectives for an individual's journey to recovery.

David Lewis Award

The San Mateo County Mental Health & Substance Abuse Recovery Commission is seeking nominees for its annual David Lewis Award - Recognizing Outstanding Contributions towards Recovery. This honor is given to the individual or organization that has made an extraordinary difference in the lives of people with substance abuse disorders and the San Mateo County community.

Confidentiality of private information is very important. If you are nominating someone who is in recovery, please be sure that they are comfortable revealing their status.

Awards will be presented to honorees at the SMC MHSARC meeting on September 4. Deadline for award nominations is July 5. Contact Chantae Rochester for application forms and more information at 650-573-2544.

Greater SF Bay Area Regional NAMI Affiliates Update

The 5th Semi-annual Greater SF Bay Area Regional NAMI Affiliates Meeting was hosted by NAMI Alameda County South on April 27, 2013 at John George Psychiatric Hospital in San Leandro.

Two themes were discussed:

1. Based on the results of the MoD (Mentor on Discharge) 18-month CalMHSA funded grant observed by John George Psychiatric Hospital, would other local NAMI affiliates be interested and able to replicate the program in their respective local areas? (Results of this program showed a 72.3% reduction in re-hospitalizations.)
2. An "Encouraged Recovery Path" pre- and post-psychiatric hospitalization was presented and discussed.

Five NAMI affiliates attended along with representatives from Alameda County Behavioral Health Care Services and Santa Cruz Health Care Services

Jessica Cruz, Executive Director and Steve Kite, Deputy Director, NAMI California briefed us on what is happening at the state level, followed by a Q& A period.

More details of the meeting and themes discussed can be obtained by clicking: SF Bay Regional-April 2013. Inquiries can be made by emailing: info@NAMIacs.org.

Happily Ever After, Almost – Personally Speaking

By Barbara Williams, May 17, 2013, from Treatment Advocacy Center, <http://www.treatmentadvocacycenter.org>

I have two boys, both are adults and both suffer from severe mental illness. But one has accepted treatment and turned his life around while my other son has refused treatment and continues to live on the streets.

My youngest son is in his forties and finally accepts treatment. He is now on highly effective medication, receives therapy and is no longer homeless. I worked for 10 years to get him the help he needed.

Those ten years were the most difficult of my life. I wasn't able to sleep through the night and each time I woke all I could think of was my son and what I needed to do to get him the treatment he needed. He was in his own world. He was incoherent, paranoid and unable to sleep through the night and walked aimlessly through his childhood neighborhood. He lived on the streets.

Finally, after years of phone calls and attempts to get my son into treatment, he was taken to the psychiatric hospital where he was diagnosed and given medication. At this time my son was in denial about his illness and didn't want treatment nor did he want anything to do with me. I was the enemy who wanted him locked up, as far as he was concerned. He spent three years in a facility, following which we worked with social services to find him a place to live.

He has been living there over three years now and we have rebuilt our relationship, thanks to the medication and treatment he is receiving. He regularly visits me and we speak by phone frequently - he is no longer suffering. He is happy again and I have my son back. Thanks to treatment, he's a helpful and compassionate human being with a positive outlook on life.

But we are not a complete family yet. My oldest son is nearly fifty years old and also suffers from severe mental illness. Like his younger brother, he also does not believe he is sick. But unlike his younger brother, he has never been treated or diagnosed and is now homeless after living on the fringes of society for most of his adult life.

While I've contacted crisis and mental health agencies in the town he is in, they cannot provide me with information. It's so difficult, when you feel your hands are tied due laws preventing family members from obtaining information about adult children. I pray for him and hope he will someday get treatment and we will once again be a complete family.

My children have suffered immensely because of the way our system abandons people with severe mental illness. I want to live in a country that treats everyone with dignity and laws that don't prevent people from getting the help they need.

We all suffer, when just one person is suffering.

—Barbara Williams is the mother of two men with severe mental illness.
