Please attend the Mental Health and Substance Abuse Recovery Commission meeting:

Wednesday, November 6 • 3:30 - 5:00pm

ClubHouse Update

Our July General Meeting introduced Clubhouse: a membership-based social/vocational community where people living with persistent mental illness come to rebuild their lives. Participation is free.

The Clubhouse is a place to go from 9:00-5:00 weekdays to build upon strengths, talents and abilities. It is also a place to socialize evenings and weekends. It provides a safe and accepting place, valuable work to perform within the organization, and opportunities to socialize with friends and co-workers. In addition, Clubhouse coordinates access to employment and education within the wider community and help with housing. The Clubhouse provides hope and opportunities for members to reach their full potential.

There are 333 Clubhouses in 33 countries, sponsored by Clubhouse International based in New York and research that tracks their successes. Close to 100,000 people living with mental illness are able to access Clubhouses each year. There are more than 20 active Clubhouse start-up groups and California Clubhouse, here in San Mateo County, is one of those start-ups.

To learn more about California Clubhouse and Clubhouse overall, go to <http://californiaclubhouse.org> and www.iccd.org. Read about what we are doing and read about other Clubhouses around the world. Contact Juliana Fuerbringer at julianafuer@gmail.com if you'd like to participate in getting California Clubhouse launched in 2014.

The Seriously Mentally Ill: Living and Dying in America Today

It is not too strong a statement to say that in America today in many many cases we don't treat patients with serious mental illness as much as we wait for their illness to cause an explosion into some horrific act and then we "take them down" in the name of protecting the rest of society.

We've now been through Tucson, Aurora, Newtown, Navy Yard, and now the Capitol Hill shooting. What is striking is the pattern in these cases where apparently family members or friends of these individuals reported being aware of signs of emerging serious mental illness. And in some cases reported them to authorities, or tried to get help and access to care. Whatever happened next did not include access to and provision of quality mental health care, including follow-up and monitoring by care professionals.

As a society, we must now ask ourselves two questions: (1) are family members involved and noticing warning signs of emerging mental illness and (2) does our health care system act appropriately to try to help the patients??

NHMH offers four solutions for Americans to think about, and act on:

1. Mental Health First Aid (www.mentalhealthfirstaid.org) is a comprehensive, expert-vetted 8 hr course - a kind of CPR for mental disorders - that explains the warning signs and symptoms of mental disorders. Americans in all communities should take this course in order to be ready when someone in their family or circle of friends or co-workers, etc becomes ill, to be able to be a bridge to help
2. Mental Health Treatment into Primary Care: The healthcare system in the U.S. needs to integrate mental health care into the general medical setting, because this is where the majority of folks with mental health problems go for help. Further, the medical community must ensure patients receive quality, science-based mental health care there. The ACA backs these changes. The current obstacles involve changing the provider payment system and care delivery system so that mental health professionals become part of "medical" provider networks, and mental health services are paid as part of "medical" insurance benefits in health plans. With these two reforms in place, mental health specialists will be able to work in primary care, which they can't now without complicated workarounds. We must bring the medical and mental health systems together into one, unified system. Medical providers, insurers, health policy experts, elected representatives, patients and communities, we all have a role to play in this system-level change.
3. Non-lethal Force: Encourage law enforcement to use non-lethal weapons, e.g. tasers, when confronted with a seriously mentally ill person. Lethal means should only be a means of absolutely last resort.
4. Mental Health Diversion Courts: We must ask ourselves why our jails and prisons are full of mentally ill patients, in some cases as in Cook County Jail in Chicago, up to and over 30% of the population. Why are we ready to pay $35,000 a year to jail people instead of proactively providing mental health services, when so many of these prisoner-patients are poor and from families with limited means to get them mental health care. Until our mental health system is reformed, we need to remove the seriously mentally ill patients from jails and prisons and place them in appropriate care facilities under treatment.

Being a citizen is about being responsible. Isn't it time we all do our part to confront these issues?

Inter-connected: Integrated, Coordinated Behavioral Medical Care

Just as we live in an inter-connected world, we also have inter-connected medical and behavioral health care needs.

Our physical and behavioral health care needs, so often intertwined, need to be addressed together, in a coordinated fashion, by one, coordinated and communicating health care team, who work from one, shared treatment plan.

Addressing medical and behavioral conditions together is vital because medicine is now discovering that some illnesses occur in "clusters,".... such as: diabetes + coronary heart disease + depression, or depression + chronic pain + drug or alcohol disorders. These clusters happen when you have illnesses with high prevalence, high co-occurrences and adverse interactions going in both directions. If you ignore one element of the cluster, the elements do worse in terms of treatment and recovery.

A timely recognition of this fact is the Center for Disease Control's recent acknowledgement that in communicating to the public about heart disease, it must also include information about depression as a risk factor for heart disease. Heart disease and depression often go hand-in-hand, so do diabetes and depression.

30-45% of patients with heart disease suffer from co-occurring depression or anxiety. This is often true after a patient undergoes heart surgery, bypass surgery, or stent, etc. There are effective treatments for this co-occurring depression. But if left untreated, not only does the patient suffer a needless behavioral condition, which could impact their ability to function or work or enjoy life, but their medical or heart condition is likely to recover more slowly or not at all. Net result: worse health, higher costs. NHMH is proud to have played a key role in helping the CDC acknowledge the need to tell patients about behavioral risk factors associated with medical conditions, such as heart disease in their Million Hearts campaign (www.millionhearts.hhs.gov). We will continue to bring this message to the public, that true "health" includes both medical and behavioral health, working with our healthcare and public health partners.

Ask your primary and/or specialty care doctor for integrated, coordinated behavioral-medical care. Evidence-based research shows that such care leads to improved overall health and costs less over time. And life is better this way.

NAMI Legislative Update

NAMI California is gearing up for a big year of legislative advocacy in 2014, as we've recently hired a Legislation and Policy Director who will represent us in the State Capitol. This new position will allow us to keep the pressure on your representatives to consider consumers and family members in all of their decision-making.

This year, three pieces of legislation supported by NAMI California were signed by the Governor, though not all in their strongest form:

Senate Bill 330, by Senator Alex Padilla (Pacoima), requires the Instruction Quality Commission (IQC), during the next revision of the health curriculum framework, to consider developing and recommending a distinct category on mental health instruction.

NAMI California supported an earlier version of this bill that would have required that health curriculum include one hour of mental health education for all students.

Senate Bill 364, by Senator Darrell Steinberg (Sacramento), revises the Lanterman-Petris-Short (LPS) Act related to 72-hour involuntary detention for mental health evaluation and treatment, so-called "5150 holds." Key provisions of this bill: 1) Broaden the types of facilities counties may designate for purposes of 72-hour evaluation and treatment; and 2) Authorize the county mental health director to develop procedures for the county's designation and training of professionals who will be designated to perform functions under Section 5150.

NAMI California was an early supporter of this bill, but became concerned after some critical amendments were made. We advocated for changes to the language that were amended into the bill by Senator Steinberg in response to our efforts.

Senate Bill 585, also by Senator Steinberg, clarifies that mental health services provided under Laura's Law may be provided pursuant to procedures specified in the Mental Health Services Act, as well as by other local funds.

Some progress was made this year, but there is much left to do!

The Importance Of Sleep In Maintaining A Healthy Lifestyle

Three new studies show just how critical it is for adults to seek treatment for a sleep illness and aim for seven to nine hours of sleep each night in order to maintain a healthy lifestyle.

One study of 2,240 adults is the first to examine the link between obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) and mortality in Asians. Results show that all-cause mortality risk was 2.5 times higher and cardiovascular mortality risk was more than 4 times higher among people with severe OSA. The results are consistent with previous studies in the U.S. and other countries.

Another study of 2,673 patients in Australia found that untreated OSA is associated with an increased risk of motor vehicle crashes in very sleepy men as well as near-misses in men and women. Participants with untreated OSA reported crashes at a rate three times higher than the general community.

That last study examined the relationship between sleep duration and self-rated health in Korean adults. Results show that short sleep duration of 5 hours or less per day and long sleep duration of 9 hours or more per day was associated with poor self-rated health. The results add weight to recent data emphasizing the importance of adequate sleep in physical and mental health.

All three of the studies are in the Journal of Clinical Sleep Medicine, which is published by the American Academy of Sleep Medicine.

The AASM reports that at least 12 to 18 million adults in the U.S. have untreated obstructive sleep apnea, which involves the repetitive collapse of the upper airway during sleep. OSA is a serious sleep illness that is associated with an increased risk of high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, depression and stroke. The most effective treatment option for OSA is CPAP therapy, which helps keep the airway open by providing a stream of air through a mask that is worn during sleep.

Most adults need about seven to eight hours of nightly sleep to feel alert and well rested. However, 30 percent of adults in the U.S. regularly get insufficient sleep.

Help for people who have OSA or another sleep problem is available from board certified sleep medicine physicians at more than 2,500 AASM accredited sleep disorders centers.
